DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1-5,7-46 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being incomplete for omitting essential structural cooperative relationships of elements, such omission amounting to a gap between the necessary structural connections. See MPEP § 2172.01. The omitted structural cooperative relationships are: the function of said field effect transistors not being used in logic performances in relation to those logic cells.

Clearly, there has an interview conducted to clarify the subject matter claimed. The brief interview was concluded without agreement although the discussion conditions tentatively overcame the rejection based on the applied prior art. Then an amendment followed after RCE. However, the fact that the claim language insists on said field effect devices not applicable in logic performances as part of the overall claimed structure that includes said cells. In view of this briefing, it seems like there is still a void in that what function the non-performing transistors may have in the overall circuit that performs logic performance, specifically in view of a single composite circuit configuration presented by the claimed invention. The response to this action must include:

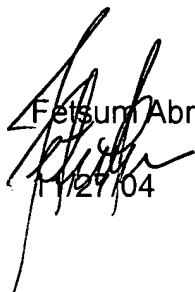

- a) How a switching device within a logic structure fails to at least partially fail to perform on logic signals transmitted and received within the circuit?
- b) What then is the function of those transistors within the logic circuit?

c) Are the transistors in electrical connection with the logic cells or otherwise? If the first is correct, how can they perform independently while logic performance is being executed by the logic circuit?

d) It is also expected that the applicant clarify the cells from the non-functional elements in a composite circuit configuration submitted as drawings with the application.
